3 Minutes After Cleansing — The Real Reason Your Skin Felt Tight

Q1.

Oil should be removed with oil?

Oil does gently dissolve sebum — but to rinse it off, you end up scrubbing aggressively, which causes more damage to the skin barrier.

Q2.

Cleansing water is better for dry skin?

It removes impurities effectively, but wiping and sweeping the skin with cotton pads or tissues creates friction and irritation.

So what kind of cleanser is truly
the gentlest on skin?

THEPURELOTUS has captured
THE BEST OF BOTH OIL AND FOAM.

Q3.

Isn't a squeaky-clean alkaline cleanser better?

The strong cleansing power of alkaline formulas disrupts the skin's moisture-oil balance, triggering the skin's protective response to produce excess sebum — creating a vicious cycle.

This is the root cause of

Combination Skin (oily outside, dry inside)

Point 2.

A New Answer for Combination Skin

Shiny on the surface, parched underneath?
THEPURELOTUS has found

With a mildly acidic balance, replenish internal moisture and regulate excess sebum.

Oil-to-Foam Texture

The oil texture that melts away makeup transforms into a fine foam the moment it meets water — cleansing thoroughly yet leaving skin feeling clean and hydrated.

Recommend

- Those seeking comfortable cleansing with minimal irritation
- Those who want skin that feels moisturized inside, not tight outside, after cleansing
- Those who prioritize both cleansing efficacy and hydration
- Those whose rough, dull skin is in need of nourishment

How to use

As a Deep Cleanser (evening / makeup / fine dust removal)

1. Dispense an appropriate amount onto dry hands and massage over the entire face in rolling motions to dissolve makeup and impurities using the oil texture.
2. Add a small amount of water to your hands and continue rolling gently until the formula turns a milky white, then rinse with lukewarm water.
3. Dispense another amount, lather well, and perform a second cleanse.

As a Light Cleanser (morning / bare face)

With both hands and face slightly damp, lather a sufficient amount, gently massage over the entire face, then rinse with water for a refreshing finish.
